Offering the latest teaching and practice of applied multivariate statistics, this text is perfect for students who need an applied introduction to the subject. Lattin, Green, and Carroll have created a text that speaks to the needs of applied students who have advanced beyond the beginning level, but are not yet advanced statistics majors. Their text accomplishes this through a three-part structure. First, the authors begin each major topic by developing students' statistical intuition ...

Jim's teaching interests include marketing management (he has taught the required first-year MBA course in marketing for nearly 20 years) and multivariate data analysis (in 2003, he coauthored a textbook based on material taught in his PhD course). In 2003, Jim joined forces with Lecturer Mark Leslie to develop and teach a new MBA elective course on sales force management. Jim has also ...

James M. Lattin | Stanford Graduate School of Business

Analyzing Multivariate Data by Lattin, Carroll, and Green fills an important niche in practical statistics for the applied researcher. For a purely conceptual introduction, Sam Kash Kachigan (Multivariate Statistical Analysis) or Joseph Hair et al (Multivariate Data Analysis) are excellent references; for more rigorously mathematical approaches, Johnson & Wichern's and Donald Morrison's texts are excellent. Analyzing Multivariate Data bridges those two poles. The rigorous texts ...
