In plants, the mitochondrial HSP70 demonstrates calcium-stimulated autophosphorylation (Vidal et al., 1993), and two subunits of the F<sub>0</sub>F<sub>1</sub>-ATPase on the inner mitochondrial membrane are shown to be phosphorylated (Struglics et al., 1998). The role of this observed phosphorylation is not yet defined, but the detected activity of several kinases within mitochondria suggests that it is ...

In plant mitochondria RNA maturation includes the generation of mature extremities not only of tRNAs and rRNAs but also of most mRNAs. While the function of 5' and 3' end processing of the structural RNAs is quite evident, still little is known about the importance of mRNA processing and its impact on RNA degradation. This chapter summarizes recent progress made in the understanding of RNA ...
